OLD CHEYENNE ELEVATOR EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

AN AMBITIOUS NEW FUTURE | EMBODYING THE WESTERN QUALITY OF LIFE

January 28, 2022

The Honorable Mayor Patrick J. Collins
Members of the City Council
2101 O'Neil Avenue
Cheyenne, Wyoming 82001

Re: Retail Liquor License Application

Dear Mayor Collins & Members of the Cheyenne City Council:

Ful-O-Pep LLC is excited to submit the enclosed application for the retail liquor license currently available.

Cheyenne's history is rooted in agriculture and the railroad, bringing together hard-working folks with a vision to cultivate a bright future from the windswept plains. This vision is alive and well at the Old Cheyenne Elevator—a place where new pioneers are reclaiming this historic gathering point to chart a new economic course in the heart of the West Edge. With unmatched character and the iron horse passing by for your viewing pleasure, the Old Cheyenne Elevator is poised to emerge as a vibrant community and entrepreneurial hub.

Reminiscent of the once thriving grain elevator, we have embraced the name painted on the building. "Ful-O-Pep" LLC purchased the property in late 2016 and since that time has harnessed the energy of the space and built on the momentum of bootstrap inspiration. In three short years, Ful-O-Pep revitalized and renovated two other warehouse properties onsite that are now home to Blossom Yoga and Hammock Fine Art. We have now set our sights on The Old Cheyenne Elevator; the keystone building on the property.

Our vision for the elevator is to create a new dining experience that cultivates entrepreneurial activity and is fully rooted in the Cheyenne community. Our flavorful offerings will include local fare from rotating food trucks, an innovative beverage program, communal seating, private space for small events, and a craft liquor store. We believe the blending of these individual project elements makes this application particularly special and will serve as the catalyst the West Edge needs to sustain momentum in transforming this emerging neighborhood hotspot.

Our team has carefully cross-referenced our vision with the liquor license options available in Wyoming. While minimal elements of our vision might be possible under another license, the cohesive packaging of this exciting concept would not progress without your favorable consideration of our application for a Laramie County Retail Liquor License.

We invite you to dream with us and envision a one-of-a-kind use enlivening this iconic landmark. Join us, and together we can elevate Cheyenne at the OCE. Should you have any questions I can be reached at (503) 701-0380.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Seitz
Ful-O-Pep LLC

OLD CHEYENNE ELEVATOR

OUR VISION

Set against the backdrop of the Reed Avenue Rail Corridor, the Old Cheyenne Elevator (the OCE for short) is ready to capture the investment spotlight of the West Edge, Cheyenne's next great neighborhood. Ful-O-Pep LLC, the property's ownership group, will redevelop the elevator building into a unique food & entertainment gathering destination that is built on the principle of amplifying local food and beverage entrepreneurs while cultivating community relationships. This is a place for friends to gather to sample Cheyenne's culinary upstarts, building champions for a thriving restaurant scene. It's a destination for visitors to collect and discover the true character of Cheyenne's next west identity.

In essence, the OCE reflects an ambitious new future for Cheyenne, promoting food, beverage and a setting that embodies our western quality of life.

THE FOOD

The establishment will provide a year-round landing pad for local food trucks that currently experience a major slowdown during Wyoming's harsh winters that stifles market growth and viability (Attachment 6). By providing an ongoing venue for food truck exploration, audience demand for new flavors can be nurtured with the end goal of spinning off new permanent restaurant concepts across the City. At least two truck spaces are envisioned inside the building, loading through ramps and roll-up garage doors. An additional food truck space is being contemplated in the courtyard to support additional diversity.

THE BEVERAGE

In conjunction with this rotating mobile food menu, the elevator will offer guests a permanent, full-service bar in a space that excites the eye and is welcoming to the entire family. Accentuating the historic post and beam architecture of the space, spending time in the OCE transports you to another place and time. Not your typical sports bar, the beverages served will highlight local producers, inviting relaxation, catching up with friends, and watching the kids play in the courtyard. Our rollup garage-style doors will welcome in Cheyenne's unbeatable summer breeze, while creating broader connections to our neighbors in the West Edge. For events, the OCE will book out the adjoining private dining room for special events, along with several patio spaces that can be reserved for reunions and family gatherings.

THE CRAFT

Guests will also have the opportunity to take home craft brews and distilled spirits from the packaged liquor store, highlighting some of the best beverages that Wyoming has to offer. This isn't your typical beer-locker, rather it is a celebration of art that is brewing and distilling. Wyoming is our home, and we will focus attention on building up our local producers. Drawing inspiration from the handcrafted beverages on our bar menu, guests will be able to purchase a curated selection of Wyoming's best beers, whiskeys, and more.

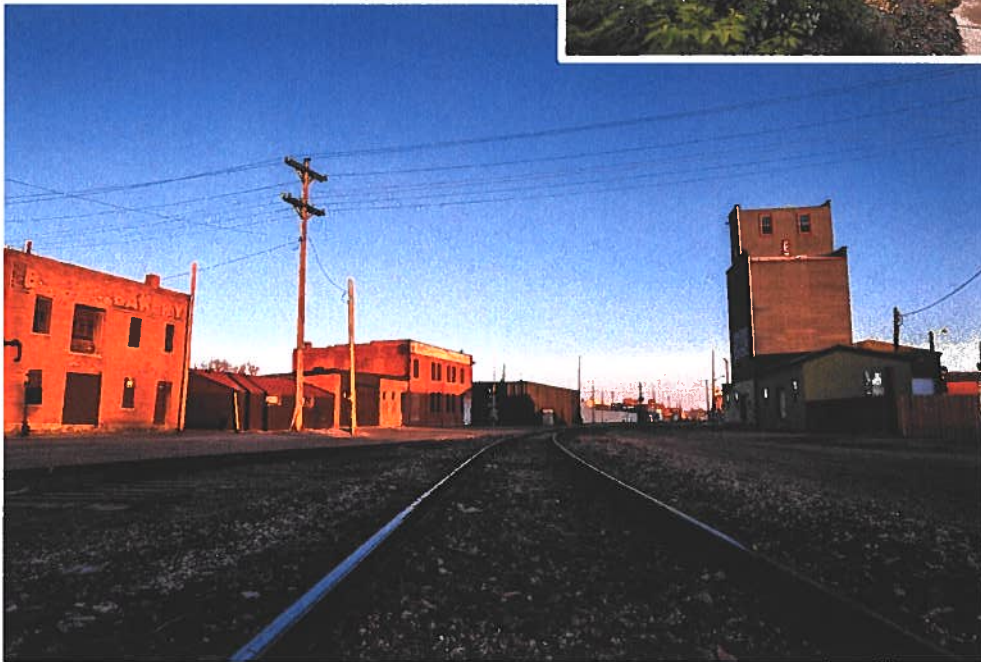

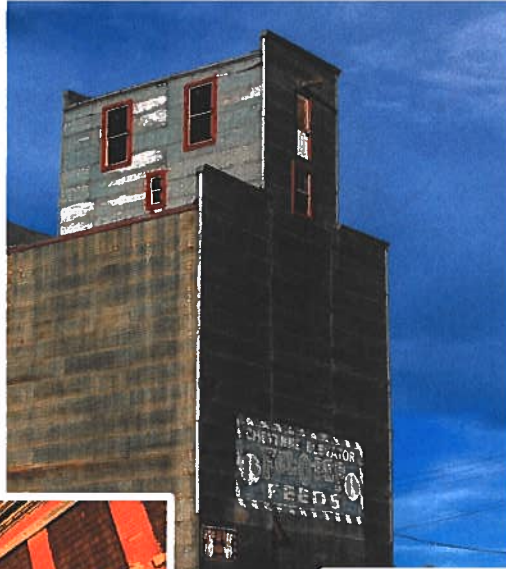

PROOF OF CONCEPT

To some the concept represents innovation - the bootstrap spirit of the West Edge at its finest. To others the establishment of a revolving food truck and bar with craft liquor store might sound like a stretch. To explore this idea further, the owners of the OCE have hosted several events to prove the concept. In 2018 as Civic Commons Park was under construction, the OCE provided the setting for EdgeFest. Over 3,000 people attended the event and drew energy into the neighborhood that reverberated with positivity. More recently, the Ful-O-Pep team hosted an open house in the grain elevator, complete with a food truck to demonstrate the power of this historic place. The OCE is sure to become one of the City's "can't miss" attractions for locals and visitors alike. There's a fine line between a dream and innovation. This concept is clearly on track to establishing itself as one of the most talked-about urban innovations that will inspire replicas across the state and beyond.

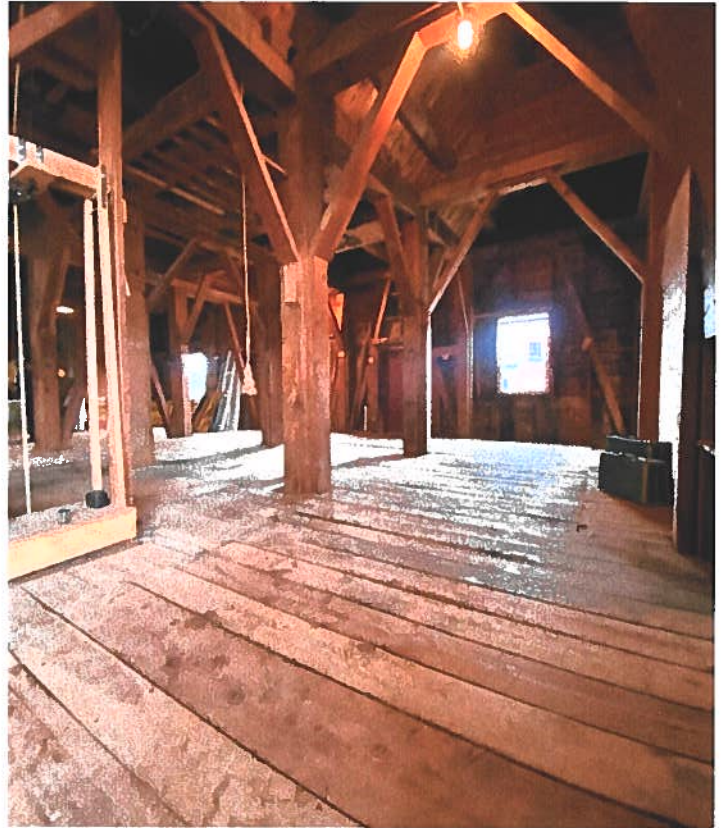

Ful-O-Pep LLC is a Wyoming Limited Liability Corporation, in good standing and established in 2016 (Attachment 2).

FINANCING

The project is being financed through a combination of private investment and a financial partnership with Western States Bank of Cheyenne. Please see letter of good standing from WSB (Attachment 5).

READINESS

The property is ripe for redevelopment and is part of a movement that launched in 2016 with the purchase of the property. With the approved zone change from Light Industrial to Mixed-Use Business in 2020, Ful-O-Pep quickly launched the renovation of two onsite warehouses that are now home to Blossom Yoga and Hammock Fine Art. Successful completion of these two ventures has generated enough momentum to justify rehabbing and breathing new life into the property's keystone building, the Old Cheyenne Elevator. Moreover, there are no contingencies for the project to move forward. The Property is wholly owned and controlled by the applicants. There will be no uncertain real estate closings, environmental hurdles, or other issues, and financial partnerships are already in place.

NEED FOR A RETAIL LICENSE

The team here at OCE respects the opportunity that this license presents the community. With the limited availability of retail licenses, our first step was to review the variety of licenses available under Wyoming's system to determine if we could operate under any of the other available licenses. Unfortunately, based on the mix of uses in our concept, the Old Cheyenne Elevator cannot operate under any of the other available licenses, as depicted in the table below. Additionally, due to the unique building constraints, the food truck approach is the only way to redevelop the property to include a food and beverage program and position the building to its highest and best use. From a cost and space perspective, the amount of investment it would take to install a commercial food kitchen is more investment than what would be returned.

COMMUNITY BENEFIT

ECONOMIC IMPACT

- Job creation. The project will create several new jobs in the community which results in a stronger tax base and aligns with the goals of the community's comprehensive plan.
- Food entrepreneurial hub. The project supports established and emerging food entrepreneurs and provides a restaurant type atmosphere for food trucks wanting to establish a presence. The project will also offer an attractive solution for the food trucks to continue operations during the cold winter months.
- Increased foot traffic. The project will drive foot traffic to the West Edge, benefiting neighboring businesses. The increase in pedestrian activity along the Reed Rail Corridor will help set the stage for necessary safety improvements along the Corridor and will sustain the momentum towards completing the Corridor project.
- Enhances the tax base. Property values throughout the district are currently depressed. In its current state, the Old Cheyenne Elevator generates $1,649.56 in property taxes annually based on a current valuation of $188,052. Based on a $1.5 million future value, the project would generate an annual estimated $11,700 in property taxes, with the total economic impact to the community estimated at $157,248 annually and $1,682,981 over 10-years.

SOCIAL IMPACT

- Eradication of blight. Vacant and underperforming buildings contribute to the overall negative perception of the West Edge and send a disheartening message to residents and visitors. Redevelopment and activation of the Old Cheyenne Elevator will help to turn the tide on the blight issue by addressing the visual impact of vacancy which often acts as a disincentive for residential and business investment.

- Historical building renovation. When the problem of vacancy and deferred maintenance is not addressed, once salvageable buildings often decay to the point in which it is not cost effective to revitalize and reuse these spaces. When demolition becomes a necessary cost of redevelopment, there is both a dollar and cultural cost to the community. This project helps preserve the historic fabric and industrial flavor of the West Edge by returning this historic building to its former glory. Additionally, the OCE hopes that future partnerships with local entities such as the DDA will serve to complement the preservation efforts of this iconic property.
- Heritage preservation. The OCE has already experienced damage and needs an infusion of capital to ensure the future of this important landmark is secure. There are only a few grain elevators left in Cheyenne and redevelopment of the OCE will help preserve a unique type of building stock that holds historic significance in Cheyenne.
- Quality of life. Ful-O-Pep LLC is a vested community partner that believes creating quality places will enhance quality-of-life issues. The establishment will draw customers from a broad cross-section of the community and will be welcoming to individuals and families. The project will also help attract and retain young professionals by demonstrating that you don't need to leave Cheyenne to have a great experience. The Old Cheyenne Elevator will provide a higher level of dining, creativity, and kicking back.
- Promote active transportation. The project supports the active transportation goals of the Reed Avenue Corridor project and will target a demographic that embraces getting around in a way that blurs the lines between transportation and recreation. The Old Cheyenne Elevator will be a focal point for the Reed Avenue Corridor, giving the surrounding neighborhoods a destination worth traveling for.

WEST EDGE IMPACT

- Supports the West Edge vision. The vision of a thriving and vibrant West Edge neighborhood is already in the hearts and minds of Cheyenne residents. This project will build on the community vision by activating and repurposing an iconic building into a place where people can come together and connect. The project will guarantee sustained momentum in making the West Edge a worthy destination.
- An anchor. The West Edge has made tremendous progress in moving closer to its goal of becoming a vibrant neighborhood in Cheyenne's core but is still in need of successful demonstration projects to help catalyze more private investment in the area. Activation of the Old Cheyenne Elevator will inspire redevelopment in the vicinity by giving people more reason to visit the West Edge and will help relieve potential investors of perceived financial risk. Several properties along the Reed Avenue Corridor are experiencing development interest based on the planned construction of the multi-use pathway, but just need assurance that the district is a stable investment and has emerged as a destination.
- Urban renewal demonstration. Using this new tool available in Cheyenne is a great way to encourage more projects to get familiar with urban renewal. Our team has investigated the potential and is excited to serve as a test project to help demonstrate the power of the URA.

TIMETABLE

PHASE 1 (12 – 15 MONTHS)

CRAFT LIQUOR STORE

Conceptual planning and building interior renovations have been initiated. Renovation of the Craft Liquor Store is slated to commence in the Fall of 2022. This project phase will include interior design and operational planning of the liquor store in addition to the full build out of the building interior. A conceptual look of the future floor plan is illustrated in Attachment 3.

PHASE 2 (15 - 24 MONTHS)

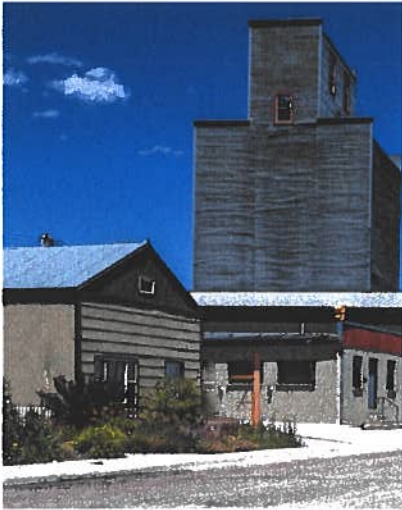

GRAIN ELEVATOR BAR & FOOD TRUCKS

Interior building design of the main Grain Elevator is expected to commence immediately upon award of the Laramie County Liquor License, with construction and build out to directly follow. After completion of the construction phase, planning for operations, training, and logistics will commence. Remaining licensing, certificates of operation, and other regulatory approval will be completed with a proposed launch in 2024. A conceptual look of our vision for this phase is rendered in Attachment 4.

OUTDOOR COURTYARD

Outdoor space is critical to this project, with options for beer, arts, and food. The outdoor courtyard space will serve to link all of the separate uses together into a united campus feel. Planning and construction of this phase will run concurrent with the Grain Elevator Bar and Food Truck Phase. Additional outdoor courtyard space is desired within the Reed Avenue Corridor space along the eastern side of the Grain Elevator. Details and scope of this outdoor portion of the project will be determined as the Reed Avenue Corridor Project progresses to that specific phase of planning and collaboration.

PHASE 3 (FUTURE DEVELOPMENT POTENTIAL) FULL CAMPUS

The vision for Phase 3 is to create a campus experience that integrates all the different uses in a meaningful and synergistic way. The buildings, open space/ plaza area, landscaping, streetscape, and pedestrian network will be designed as cohesive treatments and organized as unifying amenities, which together will create an experience like no other in Cheyenne. The Mini Vic has the potential to house an ice cream shop, tea shop, farm to table restaurant, and/or cheese shop. Redevelopment of the western portion of the property (~5,000 SF) will occur during a future phase. This area has the potential to leverage a full spectrum of developing, including a commercial ground-floor space with complimentary retail or restaurant uses. Upper floors could include residential lofts creating a true mixed-use campus whose energy can extend to neighboring vacant and underutilized parcels.

JESSUP FARM

FARM TO TABLE ARTISAN VILLAGE

This artisan village located in Fort Collins, Colorado, brings to life one of Fort Collins' early farmlands with restaurants, homespun retail, and food service artisans. In 2011, the rundown property was restored and revitalized into an economically successful business hub. Since opening, Jessup Farm has grown to a family of 13 locally owned businesses and has become a mainstay in Fort Collins where neighbors gather for coffee, a bite to eat, shopping, and more. PRELIMINARY ECONOMIC IMPACT ANALYSIS

BACKGROUND

The Cheyenne Mill redevelopment project is located at W. 21st Street and Reed Avenue and is part of the growing Reed Avenue Corridor revitalization effort. The Cheyenne Urban Renewal Authority has identified the corridor as a redevelopment priority and has indicated plans to establish a project area plan to support ongoing investment.

The developers are proposing an entertainment center focused around an 1,148 square foot bar and a 561 square foot specialty liquor store. The project will also include outdoor patio space to the east of the building and a 640 square foot party room for special events. Making this project unique is the addition of up to two indoor staging areas that will be made available for local food trucks. An additional game lawn and courtyard will be added to the west of the building providing opportunities for entertainment and an additional food truck landing pad.

Food trucks have become commonplace in bars and craft liquor establishments as they allow for a rotating variety of food types. Often food trucks develop a community following, and customers travel to their locations to enjoy their food. The developers have also indicated a desire to focus on local food truck operators to support the local economy.

ECONOMIC IMPACT

To understand the impact, it is necessary to take a deeper dive into each of the project elements.

LIQUOR STORE

For a liquor store to be successful the following elements are critical, (1) location, (2) competition, (3) product mix, and (4) personalized customer service. The store will also need to maintain a strong inventory and maximize the available space. The store will also have collaborations with craft beer and liquor in the bar to promote sales. Within the area, there is one convenience liquor store and lounge located on Lincolnway to the west. In addition, there is a specialty liquor store on Carey Avenue, which provides the closest comparison for size and product type.

Given the size and location of the liquor store, the estimate of total sales would range from $375/square foot to $550/square foot. For purposes of this analysis, we used $550 /square foot in part due to anticipated higher price points for premium beer and liquor.

BAR/ EVENT SPACE

The bar and party room combined are just under 1,800 square feet. Given the uniqueness of the space and the potential for redevelopment of the corridor, the space would likely perform at around $550 square foot with the potential to be much higher as the corridor continues to improve. The patio space also adds additional room and an amenity during the warmer summer months. The analysis includes additional sales from that patio discounted to 40 percent of the estimated indoor sales to reflect that patio activity will be most robust during the warmer summer months. However, this activity could increase as well as the site becomes more popular. Winter activities and festivals with propane heaters and firepit amenities could extend the viable season in cooler weather months.

FOOD TRUCKS

In estimating the impact of the food trucks, it is important to recognize that the space would allow for pull-in spaces to increase opportunities in inclement months. A rough estimate would suggest that the bar would average seven to eight truck visits per week. This suggests two on Fridays and Saturdays (4), plus Sunday afternoons and one or two additional days during the week, which is estimated at around 390 food truck visits per year. Sales per evening vary based on the time of year, and day of the week, but we would estimate for a truck to be profitable, they would need to do around $1,500 in sales per night on average. For purposes of the analysis, we would increase this by 25 percent to reflect the opportunity for take out food from area residents and other customers.

REVENUE IMPACT

The combined sales tax impact is captured in the table below (at 6% sales tax):

Item	Estimated Annual Sales	Annual Sales Tax Revenue
Liquor Store	$308,550	$18,513
Bar/Party Room	$1,386,000	$83,160
Food Truck Sales	$731,250	$43,875
TOTAL	$2,425,800	$145,548

With the improvements to the building and the area, the property tax revenue would also increase substantially. Based on the projected sales, the building at completion would likely be valued at a much higher rate. The project value after full-buildout development will be worth an estimated $1.5 million, this would yield an increase in annual property tax to $11,700.

The total economic impact of the project to the community is estimated at $157,248 annually and $1,682,981 over 10 years, assuming a modest 1.5% annual increase.

These numbers do not reflect the potential mixed-use building development – a new multistory building – which would have the potential to increase these numbers substantially.

This project and the investment work because the developers are owner-operators. As an owner-operator, they will have control over construction phasing, lease rates, and overall costs. Additionally, they are investing in the City's long-term vision to revitalize the Reed Avenue corridor and anticipate significant additional investment in adjacent buildings. This means that fulfilling the vision is as much a consideration as the financial profitability of the venture. In economic development terms, the concept of a "Triple Bottom Line" maintains that companies should focus as much on social and environmental issues as they do on profits. This project, in addition to providing an economic boost to the City and other Downtown West Edge property owners, will also produce social and community impacts that extend far and wide.

Local food truck owners put their foot on the gas heading into winter

Running a food truck in the winter months takes something a little extra.

Traditionally, food trucks tend to close down for the winter, fearful that the below freezing temperatures will severely damage their trucks. Some just pack up all of their flavorful ingredients and move to an area where it's warmer and easier to sell.

This year, many Cheyenne truck owners and operators are pulling the hand break, and employing different methods to overcome the frigid season.

Juan Coronado and Seth Stefanik, owners of Los Conejos food truck, are veterans of the Cheyenne winter, opting to remain open despite an often harsh decline in business when it gets too cold for customers to wait at the window for a hot meal.

It might be easier to close down, but weathering the storm is worth it to Coronado. Looking at it from the grand scheme of a five year business plan, staying open and remaining relevant to their customers is worth the variables of busted water hoses and frozen propane tanks.

"It hurts you if you look at it like, 'maybe our sales today are low compared to our costs,' but if we're looking at a five year plan, then it's it's helping you because you're staying relevant," Coronado said. "You're still serving who you can."

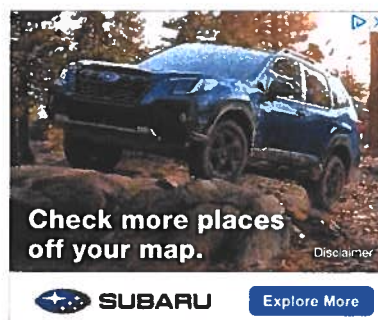

Without the flexibility of moving the truck to different businesses and street corners at will, Coronado and Stefanik have devised a new plan to keep business flowing by playing to their customers habits.

"People like habits, if they keep coming to us every Tuesday, that's what they're going to do," Coronado said. "But if we go away, and then they start going back to McDonald's, for example, then it's gonna be harder to get them back."

For the first time this winter, the truck will maintain regular hours Monday through Saturday from 11 a.m.- 8 p.m., featuring unique deals on each day. Kids eat free on Mondays, and Wyo Wednesday features $1.50 tacos if you show a Wyoming I.D. Customers can keep up with deals on social media.

Another veteran of local food truck business, Noam Mantaka, owner of Noam's Kitchen, also chooses to stay open for the season.

Mantaka, while fully prepared for all that can go wrong in the winter, is not as eager to face the bitter cold. What's more is that, like Coronado, he sees a steep decline in business, serving just a quarter of the customers he would see when the weather is more welcoming.

"The winter season is very, very intense and very hard to do, not easy at all," Mantaka said. "Especially when I don't have a lot of help now. I need to maintain the truck all the time which is hard as well."

In his experience, faucets will crack, propane will freeze, the wind chill will rock the truck. He has spare hoses at his disposal, heating pads for the tanks, extra connectors for the sink. It wasn't always this easy, but past failures inspire solutions, so he has a feeling that this winter will be much easier.

Going through the extra preparation and potential disaster is worth it for Mantaka. Parked outside a place like Freedoms Edge Brewing Co. and seeing just one smiling customer emerge from their safe indoor space is worth the trouble.

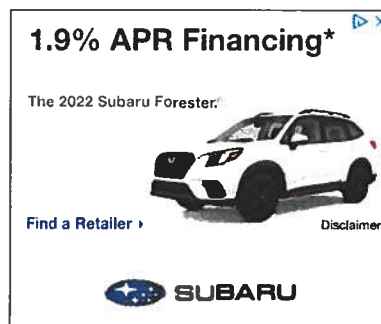

Not every truck in town has been in operation long enough to have earned their stripes by surviving the winter, but Paul Shutty and Jamie Schaffer of Yerbellies BBQ have encountered and endured enough since opening last September to see winter as a minor obstacle.

"If it wasn't bolted down, it broke," Schaffer said about appliances in earlier stages of the truck.

Shutty spent 20 years as a helicopter pilot in the military, but he and Schaffer met while working for Union Pacific Railroad here in Cheyenne. So if something in the food trailer broke, which it probably did, they taught themselves how to repair it.

They even spent about four years teaching themselves how to smoke barbecue.

It helps that their trailer is unique and surprisingly simple. They aren't frying foods, they're smoking their meats over the span of 12-16 hours. There's no maze of plumbing running throughout the truck, there isn't the need to keep a collection of tanks and hoses warm, and no hood system to speak of.

"We have to stay open because, we both worked Union Pacific and we said 'we're done with that' and here we are going 'this is gonna be our full time job,'" Shutty said. "So this is what pays the bills right now. It's a good idea for us to stay open, it's just a struggle."

When they first opened, their trouble with the truck was taken as a major point of discouragement. It seemingly served as a test, and now the winter isn't something worth stopping for.

"Food is a great way to make people smile," Shutty said. "When you got good food, it's watching the smile show up after we've been putting all the hard work in, that's the whole passion for this. It's not the dollar."

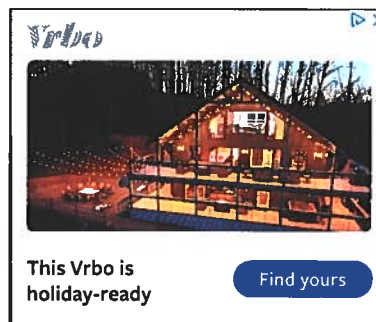

Recently, Shutty was looking through an article compiling 50 tips from successful food truck owners on how to stay in business. He followed up on the businesses featured in the article, and one after the other ended up having closed within a year of the articles publication.

He attributes the failure of these businesses to a lack of preparation. But to run a successful truck, there's something equally important to planning one step ahead.

Lauren Wolcott, co owner of Graffiti Cuisine, knows that it's going to be tricky getting through the snow and maintaining her trailer amidst the elements, but realistically, there is only so much she can do.

"You just have to roll with the punches, make your repairs and serve your clients the best that you possibly can under under uncertain circumstances when it's winter," Wolcott said.

The most important thing an owner and operator can do is adapt. Wolcott knows that things will go wrong, but this isn't a hobby, it's her business. Slowing down, or giving up for that matter, is not an option.

"I think anybody in a business, whether or not they have that skill coming in, will acquire it sooner than later or they they will probably not survive," Wolcott said.

Sometimes, the risk of damage just isn't worth the effort.

Bernie's Cafe, a food truck that opened last August, has already closed for winter as a meant to avoid costly repairs, particularly to a large water tank that is exposed on the underside of the truck.

Instead, co-owner Andrew Pitkofski, is using the time to capitalize on their catering and revitalize the menu for when the truck does return in the summer of 2022. He and his wife, who runs the truck with him, met in culinary school, so new items for the menu pop up on a rolling basis.

But the free time gives them the ability to come up with more brunch items besides the sandwich and burrito that have been popular thus far. In the works are new breakfast croissants, a pancake sandwich, and more.

In the meantime they book as many catering events as they can, some as far off as a wedding in July. They make chocolates and other sweets for Christmas and Valentines Day, and when the opportunity arises, they collaborate with others food trucks.

"Yerbellies wanted to make sure that we're staying busy through some means," Pitkofski said. "We got to sell our cinnamon rolls and we got they sold us one of their pork butts. So we got to do pulled pork cinnamon roll sliders on both our menus."

As a whole, the community of food truck owners in Cheyenne looks to support each other whether they choose to brave the weather or not. It isn't about competition, but maintaining and continuing to develop an important part of Cheyenne's culinary scene.

"We have a great city where food trucks are really starting to make a mark, build a community and build some excitement," Wolcott said. "That 'pivot and turn' and resourcefulness, I think every single one of us has that."
